As a result of the Victorian government releasing a list of people who have had convictions for a sexual offence, Daniel Smith and his friend have been accused of raping a girl with mental health issues. The shock images of the duo are making headlines around the world. This story was previously featured as a Wombat. When Lisa Smith saw a Facebook post by Daniel Smith that her son had been labelled a paedophile, she was moved to tears. Lisa and her husband Aaron Smith had given birth to baby Lachlan six months earlier, but still they had not told their son their family history. Lisa Smith remembered how Daniel Smith, who would soon become her son's stepfather, once told her that, growing up, his father had molested him. She had never questioned the family's paternity. Soon after Daniel became her step-son, Lisa Smith noticed that her son was repeatedly looking at images of another man. "Daniel spent a lot of his time looking at his phone and I would ask him, 'what you looking at, sweetheart?'," said Lisa. "He didn't like it when I asked him, so I started allowing him to have his privacy. I would open his text messages and go through them. "But after a few weeks he started telling me, 'Mum, I have to stop looking at this stuff'. I didn't think much of it, as I thought Daniel needed to grow up and I would treat him like a normal teenager. "At 20 months, he told me he liked another man and I didn't think much of it again. He started to say it again at 17 months. "His teacher said to me, 'Daniel is insisting that he is in a relationship with another man'. "I started to get confused. The child was in high risk of abuse. "It was quite a shock for me to hear the teacher say that Daniel was looking at gay material. I didn't know what to do. Daniel was looking at images of other men and I thought, 'what if this happens to Daniel?'" Lisa's son had been diagnosed with Asperger's syndrome and severe anxiety. The Smiths sought help from the Children's Safe and Sound and

Diffusion of orthopedic materials in intervertebral disc cells. Although the xenograft is believed to be an inert extracellular matrix, limited homologous and heterologous cell migration has been reported. We hypothesized that the extracellular matrix of xenografts may provide a stimulus to the cells, which may underlie heterologous migration. To examine this hypothesis, we tested the migration of cells in the intervertebral disc in in vitro models. Cells migrating from xenografts had a similar morphology to intervertebral disc cells, and inclusion of xenografts decreased the migration of intervertebral disc cells in vitro. We speculate that the extracellular matrix of xenografts contributes to this antimigratory effect. Further investigation of the interaction of orthopedic materials with the cells of the intervertebral disc may be useful in better understanding the pathogenesis of disc degeneration.Q: Apply function to all rows of a dataframe I am trying to apply a function to all the rows of a dataframe, but I dont know how. I want to sum all the values of column x This is what I tried df.apply(lambda x: sum(x['x'])) Error message AttributeError: 'DataFrame' object has no attribute 'x' A: We can use a pandas-style Pythonic method of applying a function to the entire dataframe using.apply and a lambda function. Below, the lambda function sums the values of columns 'A', 'B', 'C' (in that order) and returns the sum. df.apply(lambda x: sum(x), axis=1) If we want to apply a function to all columns of a dataframe, the axis parameter can be used to specify the index (first axis) for which the function will be applied. The code below, will sum the values of all columns in the dataframe df.apply(lambda x: sum(x), axis=None) To get a specific column to sum, we can use the index with.at to specify that column. df.apply(lambda x: sum(x.at[0]), axis=1) I am using np.sum. The sum() builtin function is a very similar function that sums the values of an array in place.
